About SJEC

SJEC is the Stanford Japan Exchange Conference, which is a student-run organization that plans a month of activities for visiting Japanese university students every winter quarter.

The Club originated in 1954 as a two-part exchange program with Keio University in Japan.

This was engineered by Professor James Watkins of Stanford through his personal contacts with Keio graduates while working in Nagoya, Japan in the late 1920s.

The program originally was named The Keio Committee as part of the Institute of International Relations (IIR), a larger umbrella organization.

Even today, the Keio-end of the exchange still is operated under IIR. In 1991 SJEC expanded the program by including students from Doshisha University and in 2009, Kyoto University joined the program.

With over 50 years of history behind our entirely student-run program, as always, the goal of SJEC is to promote further understanding and friendship between the U.S. and Japan through cultural interaction. Every member of the Stanford community is invited to join us and help make this year and every year a special one for those students who participate in the program. We can't wait to see you!
